THEATER
WORKS
HARTFORD

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A THEATERMAKER AND A FILMMAKER JOIN FORCES?

That question drove the collaboration between myself and my co-director Pedro Bermúdez on this unique “filmed (live)-to-stream” production. Our work was rooted in our desire to test the boundaries between theater and film in search of some new, hybrid form.

We “theatermakers” learned a lot this past year. Those of us who continued to create virtually were forced to think about the connection between play and audience in new and challenging ways. Our audience is now on the other side of a camera, and filmmakers have the knowledge and tools that serve that connection powerfully.

Pedro and I began our journey with a singular commitment to one truth: we were filming a play – a piece of theater – not a movie. Everything we did took place on stage including the video imagery you see – just like it would in a live theater production. We set out to explore what cinematic tools would elevate and enhance that experience.

We both learned a lot and we’re excited to share the results of our journey with all of you. What we have created has opened both our worlds (and minds) to new opportunities and possibility. It was a very special gift in this Covid-constricted world, one that we hope to continue to explore.

Enjoy!
