THEATER
WORKS
HARTFORD

From the Playwright

In March 2018, Maurice Emmanuel Parent was rehearsing the play Skeleton Crew, directed by Megan Sandberg-Zakian. Megan noticed that when Maurice was offstage, he was telling stories about 'his kids.' And the room was roaring with laughter: in the lunchroom, in the hallway, waiting to make an entrance, walking to the subway after work, the stories kept coming — endless and varied, about serious things and foolish things, all filtered through Maurice's particular worldview.

Megan had a feeling about these stories — the funny, the sad, the urgent; about hope and faith and failure, and the many ways society fails our kids. And about teachers who give everything to their students, but despair that they don't make a difference. There was also something about this performer — how he belonged so completely in the rehearsal room AND the classroom. It was painful to him to feel the split.

Megan called me.

"Will you collaborate with me to write a solo show for Maurice?"

"Yes."

"You don't even know what it's about!"

"I don't care. If Maurice is in it, I'm in."

"Oh, Melinda, there's one more thing."

"What?"

"Maurice doesn't know about it yet."

Mr. Parent wasn't Maurice's idea. He is too modest for that.

Mr. Parent began with laughter. We met regularly, recording our sessions, and fashioned a play. Laughter sustained us through the process. But we've gone to dark places too — stories from his lived experience about the racism that divides our city, and the systemic failures at almost every level to protect and educate children.

Mr. Parent follows the journey of a singularly talented Black queer man, who believes that theatre can transform lives. And how, in becoming Mr. Parent, he learns how to become fully himself. It's Maurice's story, but it's also the story of every person who has ever wondered if their lives make a difference.

When we wrote this play, we could not imagine that holding a three-year-old would seem like the action of a Superhero or a Superhuman. We always knew teachers were courageous. We just didn't understand how much. We hope that you enjoy your time with Mr. Parent. For teachers watching, we thank you!
